Sharing Wisconsin’s Stories

ONE COMMUNITY AT A TIME

The Wisconsin Historical Society embarks on a major, multi-year statewide tour; traveling to communities throughout Wisconsin, visiting with programming and an exhibit. Read more: PG 10
WITH THIS ISSUE OF COLUMNS, I am delighted to announce that the Society is launching a bold new outreach initiative in the coming months. This Statewide Community Outreach and Engagement Initiative will expand our collection, preservation and sharing of stories by bringing our collections, services and programming to your community. While not a new concept for us, as we already make vast amounts of our collections and public services available online, it does represent a new proactive means of telling Wisconsin’s stories in communities throughout the state.

The heart of this new initiative is a traveling exhibit called the Wisconsin History Tour: Sharing Wisconsin’s Stories One Community at a Time. We are forging partnerships with 11 communities that will host the exhibit for monthlong stays. And, during five days of the exhibit’s run at each location, the Society will provide free educational programming, demonstrations, author appearances, workshops and other interactive means of sharing our stories.

You can read more about the Wisconsin History Tour on page 10.

The Society, of course, has a long history of engaging audiences far beyond its headquarter’s presence in Madison. In 2013 we participated in more than 400 visits, lectures and speeches, and consulting appearances throughout Wisconsin. We have a network of 12 fine historic sites and museums that entertain and educate thousands of people of all ages every year. Our latest historic site, Black Point Estate, a historic house and gardens in Lake Geneva, joined our family of historic sites last year. And now, with summer just around the corner, the staffs of these historic places are making plans for the coming season of Wisconsin storytelling.

In Wisconsin schools, students discover Wisconsin history through the pages of the Society’s fourth-grade textbook, Wisconsin: Our State, Our Story, available in English and Spanish. More than 36,000 students in 630 Wisconsin schools have discovered their state through engrossing, classroom-tested text and “thinking-like-a-historian” questions in every chapter. An additional 10,000 Wisconsin students from 250 schools took part in the yearlong academic enrichment program, National History Day, last year, marking the biggest turnout the program has had since the Society began sponsoring it in 2002.

We also share many of our historical treasures outside of Madison. Through an innovative network of 14 Area Research Centers, the Society makes its archival collections available statewide for use by patrons in their own regions of the state. Each center serves a specific geographic region. Records created in and focused on the region served by a particular Area Research Center stay at the appropriate center. A courier service makes records stored in Madison, or at any of the centers, available at any of the network locations.

In keeping with the pioneering spirit of the Wisconsin Idea, the Society pledges to continue engaging in initiatives like those described above in order to connect with its members, friends, constituents, patrons and volunteers – from Ashland to Racine.

FOR LOVE AND MONEY:
Portraits of Wisconsin Family Businesses

A NEW BOOK from the Wisconsin Historical Society Press, For Love and Money: Portraits of Wisconsin Family Businesses, celebrates Wisconsin’s family-owned businesses. Award-winning photographer Carl Corey turned his lens on dozens of family owned enterprises throughout the state that have been in business for more than 50 years. From bakeries, barbecue joints, barbershops and funeral homes to cheesemakers, fishermen, hamburger stands and furniture stores, Corey’s photographs tell the story of families that have survived the odds, weathered tough economic times through generations and become part of the social fabric of their communities.

An exhibit of Corey’s work on the family business topic at The Museum of Wisconsin Art in West Bend will complement the book. The exhibit will be on display through July 2014. Join Carl Corey on June 19 as he tells the story of Wisconsin’s family owned businesses through the poignant photos featured in For Love and Money beginning at 7 p.m. at the McMillan Memorial Library in Wisconsin Rapids, or enter into a family business-focused discussion, led by Corey and featuring the story of Wausau’s Jankes Book Store (in business since 1902), beginning at 7 p.m. at the Marathon County Historical Society Museum in Wausau. Watch the Wisconsin Historical Society’s online calendar of events at wisconsinhistory.org/calendar for further details about this and other book events.

Carl Corey is also the author/photographer of the Wisconsin Historical Society Press book, Tavern League: Portraits of Wisconsin Bars. His work is exhibited in galleries and museums worldwide as well as in numerous private and public collections. He has won more than 100 photography awards from such groups and publications as the New York Art Directors Club, Communications Arts, Bessies, Addys and Gold Lions.

THE BINGO QUEENS OF ONEIDA:
How Two Moms Started Tribal Gaming in Wisconsin

IN 1976 A GROUP OF WOMEN on the Oneida Indian Reservation just outside of Green Bay were looking for a way to pay the light bill and other expenses at their struggling civic center. Two moms, Sandra Ninham and Alma Webster, had an idea for a bingo operation run by the tribe. Their idea became not only the tribe’s first moneymaker on a reservation, where half of the population then was living in poverty, but also helped to launch Indian gaming statewide. In the new Society Press book, The Bingo Queens of Oneida: How Two Moms Started Tribal Gaming in Wisconsin, author Mike Hoeft traces the tribe’s struggle to open that tribal-run bingo parlor and tells the story of how one game helped revive the reservation economy and strengthen the Oneida community.

An e-book edition is also available.
FLORETTA SHIPWRECK (CANALLER)

_Vicinity of Town of Centerville, Manitowoc County_

The _Floretta_, now lying on the lakebed in 180 feet of water, was constructed in 1867 by shipwright John Stupinsky. The _Floretta_ was a canaller, a unique vessel type developed on the Great Lakes and designed to transit the St. Lawrence Seaway’s Welland Canal locks while carrying the maximum amount of cargo possible. With only inches to spare while passing through the locks, canallers carried grain from ports on Lakes Michigan and Superior to ports on Lake Ontario, often returning loaded with coal to power and heat Midwestern cities. In September 1885, after sailing under a heavy southwest gale and through big seas, the _Floretta_ suffered catastrophic leaks, which led to an explosion before sinking into the lake. Despite breaking apart when it hit the bottom of Lake Michigan, the _Floretta_ wreck site has and will continue to yield significant information on Great Lakes canaller construction and their role in Great Lakes commerce.

JOHN BAETEN STORE

_De Pere, Brown County_

The John Baeten Store building is located in the heart of the historic commercial area of the city. This Commercial Vernacular form building, constructed in 1903, is unusually intact, having retained commercial space on the first floor and apartments above. The storefront has beautiful cast-iron columns, a recessed entrance with its original pressed-metal ceiling and sheet-metal ornamentation at the cornice. John Baeten was a locally prominent merchant who ran a grocery and general merchandise business. The store stayed in the family until the 1970s, and although the Baeten business was discontinued, the building has been in continuous commercial use since 1903.

BERT AND MARY CUNNINGHAM ROUND BARN

_Town of Viroqua, Vernon County_

The Bert and Mary Cunningham Barn was constructed in 1915 on a 40-acre farm near the city of Viroqua and is a rare example of a true round barn. Round barns were an expression of a progressive emphasis on efficiency of labor at the turn of the 20th century, applied to agriculture broadly and dairy farming specifically. This barn is notable for being unusually intact, and its distinctive roof truss structure and hollow structural clay tile-wall construction add to the architectural uniqueness of the building. The lower floor housed the stables and milking facility. The upper level was used for storing hay. A large silo is located at the center of the interior. This barn was likely built or influenced by the work of Alga Shivers, a local builder of round barns in Vernon and Monroe counties in the early 20th century.

KANE STREET HISTORIC DISTRICT

_Burlington, Racine County_

This district is a cohesive neighborhood of residential, religious and civic buildings constructed between 1844 and 1940. Its location in close proximity to downtown secured its popularity, and homes were built continuously until 1940. Within the district, buildings represent the popular architectural styles of the era in which they were constructed including: Greek Revival, Queen Anne, American Foursquare, Bungalow and other Revival styles. Adding to the architectural interest is the mix of homes, churches, a Masonic Temple, a school and a statue of Abraham Lincoln on a broad boulevard. The result is one of Burlington’s most beautiful and architecturally intact historic residential areas.
VOLUNTEERS AND STUDENT INTERNS pitched in this past year to help the Chippewa County Historical Society in Chippewa Falls expand and improve its exhibits documenting the county’s history. A pair of University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire student interns, Isaiah Frater and Trenton Sobeck, applied their energies toward creating or revamping two new exhibits. Frater created a music exhibit that showcases some of Chippewa Falls’ most exciting contributions to the field of music, including the world-famous, Helland Brothers Hardanger violins; country music duo, Maggie and Scottie, who played at festivals and fairs throughout Wisconsin and neighboring states; and Chippewa Falls native, Judy Henske, who enjoyed national success as a singer and songwriter during the 1960s folk movement.

Sobeck revamped the local society’s lumbering exhibit and added new signage to allow for self-guided tours. Retired county surveyor, Dennis Mickesh, created a new surveying exhibit, and new volunteers Jim and Mary Erickson created an exhibit they called Grandma’s Kitchen.

This year the Chippewa County Historical Society will begin its second decade of presenting a popular annual living-history event called The Past Passed Here May 8-11 in Chippewa Falls’ historic Allen Park, once the site of Native American and French fur trade camps. Adults and children alike explore authentic French fur trade era re-enactor camps and participate in hands-on camp activities. Many re-enactors travel from surrounding states to share their knowledge and demonstrate their skills, and food vendors feature fare typical of the 1800s. Annually 650 fourth-grade students participate in daylong, hands-on activities. This event is a past winner of the Wisconsin Main Street Program’s Best Cultural Preservation Project Award.
EACH YEAR the Society and the Wisconsin Council for Local History jointly hold regional meetings in each of the council’s 10 regions. Local hosts provide hospitality and share their community history, field services staff present workshops, and attendees share ideas and information through regional roundtable discussions. Mark your calendars and plan to attend a regional meeting in 2014. Full agendas, registration information and more details can be found at wisconsinhistory.org/localhistory. Meetings are geared toward staff and volunteers of local societies and museums, but are open to anyone with an interest in local history.

DISCOVER YOUR STORY

As the Wisconsin Historical Society embarks on the Wisconsin History Tour: Sharing Wisconsin’s Stories One Community at a Time, we have hopes to spend time with, and share stories of the past with, communities throughout the state. The Tour will represent a major, multi-year outreach effort.

For a monthlong stay at a time, the Society will bring a handcrafted exhibit to 11 communities in order to share pieces of collections we have gathered since our founding in 1846 — ranging from a Civil War soldier’s letters home, to early 20th Century photographs of Door County, to maps dating back to 1513, to the Racine story of malted milk, to maritime stories of shipwrecks in Lake Superior.

The statewide trek launches in June in Wausau at the Marathon County Historical Society.

For five days of the visit, the Tour will offer free programs for the whole family, including presentations and workshops on genealogy, oral history interviews, book talks presented by the authors, historic photo “readings,” chats about local buildings on the National Register of Historic Places, children’s story time, and conversations about historic preservation tools. There will be a full five-day spectrum of activities for each community visited.

“The Society has struggled with two burning questions,” says Jim Draeger, Wisconsin Historical Society architectural historian and director of outreach, “and that is: how do we make our collections more accessible to everyone throughout our state? And how do we, as a Society, continue to gather stories of the people who live here?”

Draeger, who will be on-site during the week of activities each month, has traveled Wisconsin extensively while completing research for his Society Press books, Bottoms Up: A Toast to Wisconsin’s Historic Bars and Breweries and Fill ‘er Up: The Glory Days of Wisconsin Gas Stations.

“With the Wisconsin History Tour, we want to meet people, get to know them, and stay connected after we leave,” notes Draeger. “From traveling throughout the state, I have experienced firsthand that ‘aha’ moment when we share the stories and history that shape who we are today.”

A TOAST TO OUR HOSTS: THE MARATHON COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Incorporated in 1952, and an affiliate of the Wisconsin Historical Society since 1965, the Marathon County Historical Society ranks among the largest and most active local historical societies in the state. Headquartered in Wausau, it holds the distinction of being the first recipient of the Wisconsin Historical Society’s highest honor for work in the field of local history, the Reuben Gold Thwaites Trophy, in 1958. It won the trophy for a second time in 1989.

The two organizations share a long and symbiotic history. Former Wisconsin Historical Society President David Clark Everest was one of the founders of the Marathon County Historical Society and also served as its president until his death in 1955. The local society’s magnificent Yawkey House Museum, home of Cyrus and Alice Yawkey, was built in 1900-1901 in the Classical Revival style. It has been a national Register of Historic Places-listed property since 1974 and underwent a $3 million restoration as a full house museum in 2008. Cyrus Yawkey, a prominent and wealthy lumberman, died in 1943, and Alice continued living in the house until her death in 1953. Their only child, Leigh Yawkey Woodson, and their grandchildren presented the house to the Marathon County Historical Society in 1954.

Today the local historical society has its administrative headquarters, research library, archives, exhibits, meeting rooms and gift shop in the Woodson History Center, another historic house and the former home of Leigh Yawkey and her husband Aytchmonde Woodson. The Marathon County Historical Society acquired the spacious, Prairie School-style house in 1995 and will host the first stop of the Wisconsin History Tour in the second-floor exhibit hall throughout the month of June.

“We are pleased to host the Tour here in Wausau,” said Mary Forer, executive director of the Marathon County Historical Society. “We hope to highlight the many local organizations that work to preserve the history of Marathon County while educating new audiences about the importance of preserving and sharing our history.”

NEW INTERACTIVE 1890S CYCLING EXPERIENCE OPENS AT OLD WORLD WISCONSIN THIS JUNE

Residents of Wisconsin and the nation were crazy about cycling during the 1890s. Beginning this summer, Old World Wisconsin will capture the excitement of this decade in its new Catch Wheel Fever! experience, which will debut to the public the weekend of June 14 - 15. The new cycling experience will remain open through the rest of the 2014 season and the foreseeable future.

Children and adults can hop aboard replica tricycles and bicycles from the era and take a spin around the track. Sizes and styles will be available that will allow everyone to join the fun. Guests can tinker at the workbench in a simulated 1890s bicycle repair shop, explore copies of period road maps for cyclists, examine an original 1890s “safety bicycle” manufactured in Kenosha, and learn late 19th-century bicycling songs. Cyclists of all ages can become a member of the Badger Wheelmen, a Milwaukee cycling club, put on period apparel, climb aboard a replica high-wheel bike and have a one-of-a-kind photo taken.

This new experience is a part of Old World Wisconsin’s master plan initiative, which, as it unfolds, will bring new and engaging experiences to guests. Catch Wheel Fever! was made possible, in part, by a generous lead grant from the Sally Mead Hands Foundation. Additional support is provided by the Old World Foundation and the We Energies Foundation.

VISITORS TO WHITEFISH DUNES State Park in in Sturgeon Bay will have an opportunity to explore a historic Lake Michigan shipwreck, without even getting cold and wet, beginning in May. Exploring Davidson’s Goliaths: The Shipwrecked Steamer Australasia will officially open to the public in the park’s nature center at 1 p.m. Saturday, May 10. Opening-day festivities will include a talk by Society maritime archaeologist Tamara Thomsen on the Australasia’s builder, James Davidson, creator of the world’s largest wooden vessels.

The exhibit comprises four panels: the first on shipbuilder Davidson’s unique construction techniques used in the manufacture of his large wooden steamers; another on the seven shipwrecks in the waters of Whitefish Bay; a panel about Davidson’s mammoth Australasia steamer and exploring how much wood he used to make such a large ship; and an in-wall video of divers exploring the historic shipwreck.

A structural model of the Australasia, made by award-winning Sheboygan model maker James Brotz (pictured below), will accompany the exhibit. David and Julie Uihlein generously underwrote the construction of the ship’s model, and the University of Wisconsin Sea Grant Institute sponsored the remainder of the exhibit. Hosting the event along with the Society are the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources and the Friends of Whitefish Dunes State Park.

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN HISTORIANS CREATE ARCHIVES PROCESSING ENDOWMENT

PROFESSORS ALLAN AND MARGARET BOGUE earned distinguished reputations as historians, serving most of their long careers on the faculty of the University of Wisconsin-Madison History Department. The Society’s library and archives provided invaluable sources for the Bogues’ research — and now they are giving back. They recently presented the Society with a sustaining gift of $100,000 to establish an endowment specifically for archival processing. These funds will enhance the Division of Library-Archives’ capacity to acquire and process correspondence, diaries, business records and other documentary sources. The Society gratefully accepts Allan and Margaret’s generous gift and values the contribution it will make toward the success and enjoyment of all who use the library and archives. Margaret and Allan shared their insights in a recent interview.

When asked why history matters, Allan observed that, “History is one of the best tools we have for understanding the world around us and ourselves.” Margaret added, “History gives an excellent perspective on the present — it is essential to understanding family, local, national and international development over the centuries.”

Allan’s early work centered on American regional agricultural development and later broadened to include environmental history and interdisciplinary research. Margaret shared these interests and is well regarded for her research on Great Lakes history. She was influential in the advancement of history education through her work with the UW-Extension.

Margaret and Allan have good reason to see the Society as a special institution. According to Margaret, “For teaching, research and writing, the Society’s rich printed and original resources for the U.S. and Canada were a major reason for coming to the University of Wisconsin.” For Allan, “The Society is, plain and simple, the best organization of its kind in the United States.”

What inspired the Bogues to make their generous gift? Allan said: “The Wisconsin Historical Society has been unbelievably supportive and, in effect, my research home since 1964. In an extremely modest way, this gift is a payback — made in the hope that others may benefit in the future as we have in the past.” Margaret agreed, noting that, “The library and archives of the Society have made major contributions to my teaching, public speaking, research and writing.”

When asked, “What would you say to someone who is considering a gift to the Wisconsin Historical Society?” Margaret offered this suggestion: “By all means do give to the Society. It serves many diverse groups of people doing research — those needing help with their community and family history, those interested in Wisconsin history generally, students at all levels, those training to become professional historians, scholars in many areas of U.S. history and many segments of the Wisconsin State government as well”. Allan’s response, “Be very generous!”

We couldn’t agree more and are deeply grateful to Allan and Margaret for their generosity.

ELECTA QUINNEY: Stockbridge Teacher

THIS BOOK FOR YOUNG READERS details the life of Wisconsin’s first public school teacher in the newest addition to the Society Press’ Badger Biographies series, Electa Quinney: Stockbridge Teacher by Karyn Saemann. This biography follows the amazing journey of a Stockbridge-Munsee Band of Mohican Indians woman who received her education at boarding schools in New York and followed her tribe to Wisconsin in 1828. There she began teaching the children of the Stockbridge-Munsee Band of Mohican Indians as well as the sons and daughters of nearby white settlers and missionaries. Quinney’s life provides a detailed window into pioneer Wisconsin and discusses the challenges and issues faced by American Indians in the 19th century. An e-book edition is also available.
