A parent who does not encourage his young children to persevere in their studies may find that they will not develop the same degree of independence that they would otherwise have. The pattern of success is often determined by the amount of effort put into it. The more effort, the greater the reward.

The tradition of independence is passed down from generation to generation, and it is important to instill this value in our children. By doing so, we are helping them to become strong and confident individuals who can stand on their own two feet.

It is important to remember that success is not just about acquiring knowledge, but also about the effort that one puts into it. The more effort, the greater the reward. This is true in all aspects of life, whether it be in school or in life itself.
