POETRY.

For Freedom's Journal.

Here is a flower that will not fade,
Its beauty pure and calm and mild.
It blooms in the fields of humanity,
And thrives upon the best in all men.

A voice of youth, a voice of joy,
Its message clear and sweet to hear.
It speaks of peace, of love, of truth,
And fills the hearts of all who hear.

And when the day is done and night,
And stars shine brightly in the sky.
May this flower of purity remain,
And bring its light to all who fly.

House of Refuge.

The golden hours of innocence,
They flash like stars in the night sky.
And all that glows in the eyes of grace,
That breathes of peace or calls for aid.

A voice of woman's noblest age,
Come from the years gone by.
I see her heart is so pure and true,
Her hands are filled with beauty's dew.

BROADWAY.

We came to this city, to this land,
To fight for justice and freedom's right.
To honor the dead, to remember the brave,
And bring to all the world a new worth.

A voice of young men's noblest age,
They choose to fight for their country.
For what they hold dear, for what they love,
They stand firm in the face of adversity.
