From the Chicago Observer.

Of course, my dear sir, I do not want it. I do not want it. And even if I did want it, I do not want it. I am not in the market for it. I have no use for it. I do not want it. I do not need it. I do not want it. I do not want it.

It is to be lamented that there is no charge to which many, many others would not be ready to submit, if they could. I have no use for it. I do not want it. I do not need it. I do not want it.

And if I do not want it, why should you want it? I have no use for it. I do not want it. I do not need it. I do not want it.

It is to be lamented that there is no charge to which many, many others would not be ready to submit, if they could. I have no use for it. I do not want it. I do not need it. I do not want it.

The last thing that I want is to be seen in public with such a property as this. I have no use for it. I do not want it. I do not need it. I do not want it.

And if I do not want it, why should you want it? I have no use for it. I do not want it. I do not need it. I do not want it.

A LIFE OF TRIALS

I have the day completed my thirtieth year. It may fairly be supposed that this is the time when a man is entering on the brink of life, and that his experience is beginning to be important. In the course of a few months, the years which have passed will have increased my experience, and I will have to consider myself as a man of the world. However, I cannot say that I have been considering what I have learned, and what I have done, for the last three years. I have been thinking of myself, and of the world, and of the great events that have happened in it. I have been considering what I have learned, and what I have done, for the last three years. I have been thinking of myself, and of the world, and of the great events that have happened in it.

The first may teach the younger part of my life, in this age of instruction, to be an economical and impecunious man. In the second, that it is not necessary for the most important part of my life, to be an impecunious and economical man. In the third, that it is not necessary for the most important part of my life, to be an impecunious and economical man. In the fourth, that it is not necessary for the most important part of my life, to be an impecunious and economical man. In the fifth, that it is not necessary for the most important part of my life, to be an impecunious and economical man.
