James Gilbert

James Gilbert, who has been at the head of the Freedman's Bureau at Washington for the past two months, has recently opened his GARDEN on the 28th of May, in the 4th ward, of New York, and is now looking for Gardeners to care for his gardens. The gardens are located on the corner of 12th and 4th street, and are open to all persons, free of charge.

New York, April 20, 1865.

The price is 50 cents per pound, payable quarterly in advance. The gardeners are to be paid annually on the 1st of May, and all gardeners are required to work at least 30 hours per week.

Ralph W. TAYLOR.

The Garden will be open to all persons, and the gardens will be kept in a good state of cultivation. All gardeners will be furnished with seeds, tools, and other necessary supplies.

A. F. ALDRICH.

The gardeners are to be paid monthly, and the gardeners are to be supplied with all necessary tools and materials.

ST. VINCENT.

ST. VINCENT. — The lady of the house, who was attending to her business, was called out by the sound of a bell. She ran to the door, opened it, and found a man standing there, who proceeded to tell her that his horse was lame, and that he required a doctor. The lady, who was not used to such accidents, was much alarmed, and asked the man what was the matter with his horse. The man replied that it was lame, and that he wished to have it examined by a doctor. The lady, who was much too inexperienced to know what to do, asked the man if he had a doctor in the neighborhood, and he replied that he did not. The lady, who was very anxious to have her horse examined, asked the man if he would mind letting her have a horse to ride while her horse was being examined. The man agreed, and the lady mounted the horse. The horse was a very fine one, and the lady rode it very well. She had only been on the horse a short time when she noticed that the horse was lame. She dismounted, and examined the horse, and found that it was lame. She then mounted the horse again, and rode it to the doctor, who examined the horse and pronounced it to be lame. The lady, who was much relieved to have her horse examined, thanked the doctor and the man, and said good-bye. She then rode back to the house, and found that her horse was not lame. She then took off her coat, and sat down to write some letters. She had only been writing a short time when someone knocked at the door. She opened it, and found the man who had brought the horse. He said that he had forgotten to thank her for letting him have the horse, and that he wished to give her a present. The lady accepted the present, and thanked the man. She then went to bed, and had a very good night's sleep.
